Hotel Rougemont, Pays-d'Enhaut

The Pays-d'Enhaut, in the heart of the Alps of the Swiss canton of Vaud, is a small mountain paradise.

PAYS-D'ENHAUT

Pays-d'Enhaut

The municipalities of Château-d'Oex, Rougemont and Rossinière welcome guests throughout the year, offering them a concentration of naturalistic and cultural sensations without neglecting the rich offer of summer and winter sports activities.

Using the mountain railway line that connects Montreux - on Lake Geneva - with the Bernese Oberland, the Pays-d'Enhaut (www.chateau-doex.com) can also be reached by the famous panoramic train Golden Pass MOB - just another of the emotions that this enchanting alpine corner offers.

The Pays-d'Enhaut, like the many fascinating places in Switzerland, is easily accessible - without using the car - thanks to the Swiss Travel Pass which allows you to use all the possibilities offered by the integrated Swiss Travel System: trains, boats, buses and urban transport vehicles.

Hôtel de Rougemont & Spa

Rougemont

A sense of sophisticated calm placed alongside the enveloping warmth of mountain hotels is the first impression one gets when greeted at the Hôtel de Rougemont - in the enchanting Swiss Alpine scenery of Rougemont, in the Pays-d'Enhaut, not far from Gstaad.

The location of the hotel allows you to fully enjoy the tranquility provided by the place. The alpine style of the building, however, conceals a contemporary atmosphere inside. Rationality and sober elegance characterize the different spaces in which wood and stone are the dominant features. The modern décor, completed by the subtle work done on the light, thus joins the intense views of the surrounding landscape. The intimate atmosphere defines the Spa: an oasis of well-being characterized by selected products and treatments.

In the elegant restaurant Le Roc by Edgard, the gastronomic proposals of chef Vania Cebula, with the advice of the already starred chef Edgard Bovier, wisely play with the ingredients, thus combining the attention to the mountain territory with the intense Mediterranean character: a characterizing trait, this last, of the gastronomic thought of Edegard Bovier. With his creations, Vania Cebula therefore testifies to the growth parable of a young chef, rich in talent and technical bases.

A pleasant encounter with the quality and solid consistency of the most authentic mountain flavors, is proposed, instead, by the Café du Cerf a few steps from the hotel, a mythical address that has gained new momentum thanks to Edgard Bovier.

It is from this successful fusion of high-level experiences, combined with nature and silence, that the Hôtel de Rougemont derives its fascinating aspect of a chest of luxury.
